From Us to You

Welcome to Newsletter No. 3                        July ~ August ~ September

How will we get through Summer?

“How long stormy springtime
wet contentious April, winter chilling the lap of May but at length the season of summer does come.”

This is a quote from Thomas Carlyle, a Scottish Philosopher (1785-1881).

At the time of our last Newsletter we saw the start of Spring but Summer has now arrived - it does come!

All of us, in our bereavement, often wonder if the dark winter days of grief will ever end and it can be hard for us to watch other people enjoying carefree summer days.

We hope that, with each others help, summer will come to us all because we know, from many attending our Coffee mornings, that even though there is a “long stormy Spring” Summer does come.

Let’s Get Sharing

Thoughts from a GP

Last week my husband and I took a small trip to a place where we used to take his parents every year. We have not been back since they both died so it was a bitter sweet experience. We found ourselves taking the same route, visiting the same eating spots, looking for the same treasures. The trees were absolutely gorgeous, the weather was perfect, people were laughing and enjoying themselves and we seemed to be handling the crowds with minimal stress. My husband was somewhat nostalgic as he had a tendency to want to see the things that his Dad loved and would say, “do you remember Dad would eat this and go back for seconds?”. I think it was a very healing day for him.

As we get older we see the beauty in things that when we are young we are too busy to see. I think I failed to see that his parents would not be making this trip forever and how important it might be for my husband to revisit the place of his memories. I am so glad we took the time, slowed our pace and soaked in the day.

Take Time

Take time to gaze at a sunset sky
Where colours blaze to dazzle the eye.
Take time to watch a moonlit sea
And look in awe at a towering tree.
Take time to look in the heart of a flower
Adorned with diamonds from a gentle shower.
Take time to listen to the song of birds -
A paean of joy without need of words.
Take time to tell your closest friend
Your love and loyalty will never end.
Take time to stop and stand and stare
At wonders round you everywhere.
Take time to make time -
For all too soon there is no more time.

I have days when it seems such a big piece has been ripped from my life that only a gaping hole is left. Yet I also have days of celebrating new beginnings. My life and my roles are different now, and many of the changes I have experienced are positive ones. I am learning every day how to be a “creative survivor.” And I trust you will too.
It is important to stay active and engaged in your local community. Choosing activities that get you out and about, meeting new people or volunteering in your local area can help give you a real sense of achievement in your life. Most people who volunteer give their time in order to help others, but there is a secondary benefit - volunteering is good for you. Working with other people, learning new skills, meeting new friends and knowing that you are making a difference can all help you to stay fit and active.

It is a privilege to hear stories from people’s lives. These stories are sacred. What memories are you leaving for family? Take some time to consider your legacy. In the end it isn’t about the money we leave behind but the meaning our lives have created.

There are many ways to leave your personal legacy. Perhaps writing a letter of gratitude to special people in your life or write down favourite scriptures, songs or quotations that are special to you. How do you want to be remembered? What have you learned in the school of life? You might be surprised at what you might have to share if you jot down some thoughts.

Take that sentimental journey but remember to share it with loved ones.

A journey of a thousand miles begins with but a single step.
Chinese Proverb

I Know I am Moving Along in My Grief Journey When………

• I want to do more with my life than “just survive”
• I can laugh without feeling guilty.
• I’m not afraid anymore of losing the memory of my loved one. I know it will always be with me.
• I’ve come to realize that doing little things for myself is OK.
• I’m not as much afraid of the future.
• I don’t find myself “searching” for my loved one as much as before.
• I can get through the holidays, birthdays and anniversaries more easily than I used to.
• I can reach out and help other people.
• I can engage in some activities I had given up after the death.
• It doesn’t hurt as much as it used to.
• I can see the memory of my loved one as “less saintly” i.e. not perfect.
• I can put away some of my loved one’s belongings and feel okay about it.
• I can look back and see my progress.
